"Princeton’s students are its greatest resource, and the ideas with the most potential to transform us are the ones shared among students."

An artist, athlete, and accomplished web designer majoring in computer science, Jon Harris ’02 has co-founded a new student arts magazine called Troubadour. The inaugural issue, published last fall, featured works by students as well as renowned faculty and alumni. As a sophomore, Jon gained attention on campus for painting an 18-by-12 foot mural for his 10-person suite in Dodge-Osborn Hall. As a member of the varsity water polo team, he also designed the team’s web page. Following commencement, he will dedicate next year to expanding the audience for Troubadour.
